Important Functions/Activities of Camp War Eagle Staff

The Camp War Eagle program is very active and physically challenging for staff members. A successful staff member must be able to function physically, mentally, and emotionally in a remote, rustic (non air-conditioned) atmosphere for a five to twelve week time period, depending on contract. The staff member may be involved in supervision of multiple young people under 18, strenuous physical activity, and extended work hours. The staff member must be able to safely perform the following daily activities with or without reasonable accommodation, which include but are not limited to:

- At least one hour every day of rigorous team competition and two to three hours of individual instruction, some of which are full-contact sports that require physical stamina and most of which are conducted outdoors;
- Travel across rough terrain, and strenuous physical activity;
- Swim safely in a lake with limited visibility;
- Supervision and interaction with multiple groups of young camp participants under 18;
- Run, jump, pivot, cut, throw and hike with limited access to food and medical support at times.

If a chronic medical, emotional, or behavioral condition exists (past or present), the staff member must be capable of performing the functions/activities listed above with or without reasonable accommodation and should be capable of "self-management" of his or her condition due to the remote location of the camp and limited access to medical care. If surgery has been performed for orthopedic repairs, the staff member must use supports (braces, knee sleeves, etc.) during all physical activities as directed by physician. A release from the physician must be sent to camp if the device is not necessary.

I have examined this person herein described and have reviewed his/her health history and the functions/activities performed at Camp War Eagle described above. It is in my opinion that he/she is physically able to engage in camp activities and physical demands of this position except as noted above.
